Blackbird - Alter Bridge

The willow it weeps today A breeze from the distance Is calling your name Unfurl your black wings and wait Across the horizons It's coming to sweep you away It's coming to sweep you away Let the wind carry you home A blackbird fly away May you never be broken again The fragile cannot endure The wrecked and the jaded a place so impure The static of this cruel world Cause some birds to fly Long before they've seen their day Long before they've seen their day Let the wind carry you home A blackbird fly away May you never be broken again Beyond the suffering you've known I hope you find your way May you never be broken again Ascend may you find no resistance Know that you've made such a difference And all you leave behind Will live to the end The cycle of suffering goes on But memories of you stay strong Someday I too will fly and find you again Let the wind carry you home A blackbird fly away May you never be broken again Beyond the suffering you've known I hope you find your way May you never be broken again

May you never be broken again
