Farewell - Avantasia

Days had come, winters had gone And we gamboled like siblings in Paradise I was your knight, holding you tight As a brother when I saw your crying eyes Time went by and we had to say goodbye Staring up to the clouds above Children, so little and sad Hoping the saints could help one day Lead us together again Holding the key to the alley of dreams Still in hands Time telling me to say farewell But I knew that I would fight hell And I knew: We will Go for another time we can see For another time we'll be free For no more farewell Time telling me to say farewell But I knew that I would fight hell And I knew: We will Go for another time we can see For another time we'll be free For no more farewell Stepbrother tell me where have you been When they brought me to This godforsaken place Sign of the Cross, they took me away For healing with herbs by the way of grace Now I wait for the day to feed the flames I have been caught in a cage of despair My heart as a monk's cell so empty and bare But no holy water can Make me forget you again Time telling me to say farewell But I knew that I would fight hell

And I knew: We will

Go for another time we can see For another time we'll be free For no more farewell Time telling me to say farewell But I knew that I would fight hell And I knew: We will Go for another time we can see For another time we'll be free For no more farewell Time telling me to say farewell But I knew that I would fight hell And I knew: We will Go for another time we can see For another time we'll be free For no more farewell Time telling me to say farewell But I knew that I would fight hell And I knew: We will Go for another time we can see For another time we'll be free For no more farewell No farewell could be the last one If you long to meet again No farewell could be the last one If you long to meet again No farewell could be the last one If you long to meet again No farewell could be the last one

If you long to meet again
